A Warm Meal to Feed Spirits

Expanded Home Delivered Meal Service Keeping Seniors Healthy, Connected

In typical times, lunchtime at the Wilsonville Community Center is a lively affair that brings together a congregate of 30 to 50 local residents to socialize and enjoy a hot, home-cooked meal four days a week. Musicians and singing groups entertain diners, and a festive birthday celebration takes place each month.

"The seniors really appreciate it," says Nutrition Coordinator Janice Mash. She and fellow Nutrition Coordinator Catherine Day plan menus, purchase food and prepare meals.

"One client told me that we may consider ourselves cooks, but he thinks of us as "It may sound simple, but a delicious, warm meal during uncertain times is important," chefs." When "Stay Home, Stay Safe" orders paused these communal meals in March, Community Center staff got creative to continue meal service and provide connection for a population newly isolated. Building upon a successful Home Delivered Meal program that was packaging 45 meals for homebound residents daily, the Community Center has doubled daily production. About 90 hot meals are being delivered or picked up each Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday (a frozen meal is provided with Wednesday's meal for Thursday).

"It may sound simple, but a delicious, warm meal during uncertain times is important," said Sadie Wallenberg, the social worker who signs in-need residents up for the free service.

Moving to an all "take-out" model proved challenging. Mash sourced more packaging and containers and adjusted menus to include more travel-friendly entrees. SMART Transit drivers stepped in, replacing volunteers in the interest of public safety.

Ridder Road Segment to be Closed for Roadway, Pipeline Construction

To complete intersection improvements and the installation of a 66-inch raw water pipeline, the City is closing a portion of Ridder Rd., July 6 to Aug. 14.

Ridder Rd. is closing to thru traffic between Graham's Ferry Rd. and Peters Rd., with access available to local businesses. A detour route is planned along Day Rd. and 95th Ave. Local access to Garden Acres Rd. is to be provided by a temporary roadway connecindustrial roadway in preparation for future industrial development within Coffee Creek Industrial Area. Improvements include extension of sewer, water, and storm drainage pipelines, as well as wider travel lanes, protected bike paths, sidewalks, and landscaping.

The project includes the installation of a segment of Willamette Water Supply System (WWSS) 66-inch water pipeline. The WWSS is a partnership between Tualatin Valley Water District, City of Hillsboro, and the City of Beaverton to develop the mid-Willamette River at Wilsonville as an additional water supply source for customers in Washington County. The additional water supply is needed to meet future demand and provide a more resilient regional system. A coordinated effort to install the new pipeline as part of the City roadway project reduces construction impacts and saves money through shared costs.

The $13 million Garden Acres Road project is funded with $3.8 million from the Coffee Creek Urban Renewal District, $1.9 million in City systems development charges paid by new development and $7.3 million from the Willamette Water Supply System. For more information, contact Zach Weigel, PE,

Mayor's Message Addressing Our Differences "the Wilsonville Way"

Last month, I had the opportunity to lend encouragement to a few hundred people who peacefully marched from Town Center Park to Old Town to protest the inequitable treatment of Black people.

The group lay silent in front of City Hall for nearly nine minutes to reflect on George Floyd's final tragic moments. Both somber and effective, the demonstration allowed me to mourn his death, dwell on its systemic causes, and ponder how to use my influence to best effect positive change.

Throughout the event, I observed that nearly every participant wore a face covering to protect against community spread of COVID-19, and that marchers attempted to keep some physical distance from one another. Though many have begun to move about more freely, this continued vigilance to contain the virus remains vitally important to older residents and others most at risk of serious illness.

The event proceeded in "the Wilsonville Way." That is to say that even when tensions get high, we historically manage conflict here without devolving into chaos.

Even as protesters voiced a desire for police reform, members of the Wilsonville Police Department escorted and protected them. Everyone remained cordial and focused upon completing the job they were there to accomplish.

Of course, there should be no dispute when it comes to civil rights for Black Americans. Nobody should be punished for the color of their skin.

Historically, our city's congenial approach to conflict has allowed us all to be good listeners and better stewards for community progress. When we are not distracted by the differences, we preserve more energy to find the common ground that leads to community improvement.

We are fortunate to live in a place were so many are motivated to pursue what they believe is in the best interest of the Wilsonville community. Here's hoping that continues for a long time.

Of course, there should be no dispute when it comes to civil rights for Black Americans. Nobody should be punished for the color of their skin. Our Council hears the pleas of the Black community, and is seeking to identify best practices to advance the City's equity and inclusion efforts.

Anyone who encounters policies or actions that perpetuate systemic racism should bring those to our attention. We want everyone to feel safe here, and we recognize that our life experience does not provide us with the necessary perspective to see where change may be needed. We're listening and invite your participation in the process.

Phase II Re-Opening Delayed; Use of Masks Required in Public

The Governor's office is slowing down re-opening efforts amidst rising numbers of confirmed CO-VID-19 cases statewide.

A June 17 directive is establishing new guidelines within the Portland-metro area, including the requirement that face coverings are worn in all public places.

Oregon recorded 278 confirmed or presumptive cases on June 16, the highest single-day total since the health crisis began. Oregon is now coordinating a joint re-opening of Multnomah, Washington and Clackamas Counties to limit transmission of the virus.

Clackamas County is to remain in Phase I of reopening; the earliest the County could enter Phase II is July 10, three weeks after Multnomah County began Phase I.

Details of the mask requirement weren't available pending the release of an executive order; the requirement excludes people with medical conditions that make it hard to breathe and children younger than 12.

The Oregon Health Authority's public health guidance (above) remains the best way to reduce community spread of COVID-19 and to protect your health.

A complete guide to State re-opening efforts, can be found at govstatus.egov.com/or-covid-19

Drivers adhere to social distancing guidelines and keep their delivery encounters brief. Nevertheless, their daily visits provide some much-needed human connection for meal recipients, benefiting their cognitive, emotional and physical health.

Contact Tracers May Call; It's Important to Beware of Scammers!

Contact tracing is the process of identifying people who have come in contact with someone who has tested positive for COVID-19.

Contact tracers work on behalf of public health agencies to speak to those infected to obtain the names and phone numbers of everyone they came in close contact with while possibly infectious. Contact tracers let these people know what steps to take to keep themselves and the public safe.

You may get a phone call or a letter – not a text message – from a legitimate contact tracer to discuss your exposure. They will NEVER ask you for a Social Security number, bank account, or credit card num-

Library Now Open to Public, Resuming Additional Services

At press time, the Library was scheduled to be open in July in accordance with public health guidance from the State of Oregon.

Initially, the Library is offering pick-up of items on hold and assistance from librarians. Over time, services are being added as they can be provided safely, including computer access, the big picture window in the magazine reading area, sneeze guards have been installed at the circulation and reference desks, and floor decals are in place to help enforce physical distancing.

Our online services now include additional digital options for books and learning opportunities. We have also created YouTube programming to provide online programs for all ages, many of which are interactive.

As excited as we are to see our Library community, remember: if you feel sick, please stay home! Your holds will still be waiting.

While due dates for all materials have been extended, we ask that you return items when you are done with them. Book drops are always open, so please return your items when it is most comfortable for you.

SMART Receives $1.2M COVID-19 Relief Grant Award from FTA

In June, the U.S. Department of Transportation's Federal Transit Administration announced a $1.2 million grant award to SMART Transit as part of the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act.

SMART is using the grant funding to pay operating, administrative, preventive maintenance, and other expenses during the COVID-19 pandemic.

"This historic $25 billion in grant funding will ensure our nation's public transportation systems can continue to provide services to the millions of Americans who continue to depend on them," said U.S. Transportation Secretary Elaine L. Chao, upon announcing CARES Act recipients.

"The City appreciates the action by Congress and the Oregon Congressional Delegation to provide support to local government agencies during the COV-ID-19 pandemic," Wilsonville Mayor Tim Knapp said. "Federal subsidy for substantial costs for operational modifications and related transit expenses will benefit residents, commuting employees and local businesses."

With the announcement, the FTA issued a Safety Advisory prompting transit agencies to develop and

Stevenson Recognized by KWMFO

On behalf of the board of the Korean War Memorial Foundation of Oregon (KWMFO), Greg Caldwell, interim chair of the KWMFO, recently presented an appreciation award to Brian Stevenson, Program Manager, Wilsonville Parks & Recreation.

The Award was in recognition for Stevenson's work with the KWMFO to maintain the Korean War Memorial at Town Center Park and to support the foundation's mission to honor Korean War veterans and educate the public about the Korean War.

The award was presented "with our deepest appreciation for your steadfast work, your competence and reliability, and your enduring good humor in service to the Korean War Memorial Foundation of Oregon (KWMFO) over many years!" Caldwell said.

City Renews Pursuit of Arts, Culture and Heritage Strategy

Wilsonville is resuming work toward the City Council's goal of developing a communitydriven city-wide Arts, Culture and Heritage Strategy.

The City seeks a long-term plan that supports community aspirations for a vibrant cultural scene. Previously, in 2018, program managers completed initial fieldwork research, interviews, a community survey and public meeting to yield several findings:

- A strong desire for a central "makers' space" for artists to create and exhibit to the public.
- Increased participation by Library and Parks and Recreation staff in organizing and facilitating cultural events.
- Formation of a potential arts commission to advise Council and staff.
- Increased collaboration among local governments (City, School District, Community College).

After this work was completed, two major community proposals advanced:

- Voters passed the West Linn-Wilsonville School District's $207 million ballot measure, which includes a $25 million auditorium/performing arts center at Wilsonville High School.
- The City issued an RFP to consider a year-round, multi-purpose public-use facility with potential lodging addition, and interviewed several respondents. The City suspended the process when the COVID-19 pandemic hit.

The project enters Phase Two informed by these events and challenged by the ongoing pandemic. A focus now is cultivating greater community support and organizational capacity to develop a more sustainable set of programs advancing arts, culture and heritage. During Phase Two goals include:

• A comprehensive inventory of existing arts, culture and heritage resources, programs and events

POLICE CHIEF'S CORNER

Good Community Policing Starts With Hiring, Training the Right Officers for the Job

Like many of you, when I watched the events that Culminated in the recent death of George Floyd, I was shocked and saddened. My children saw it, too, and it led to some difficult conversations.

I condemn the response in Minneapolis, and want to assure our community that this does not at all represent or resemble how police operate here in Wilsonville.

The Clackamas County Sheriff's Office is constantly reviewing its policies and keeping them up to date with best practices and legal precedents. We also review our training and practices to identify the most sound, effective and safe methods. Most importantly, we go to great lengths to hire the right people, and I'm proud to lead the team we've assembled.

The process of getting hired typically takes about 18 months. When a candidate comes in for an interview, we ask questions about race and diversity and we listen carefully. When an applicant passes the initial interviews, we begin an in-depth background investigation. We talk to family, friends, co-workers and employers. If we receive reports that an applicant does not work well with others or has issues with diversity, the candidate is not suited to work here and is withdrawn from the hiring process.

Once an officer gets hired, the next step is a 16week State academy with specific training on implicit bias, de-escalation, equity, diversity, inclusion, and use of force.

The Clackamas County Sheriff's Office takes training a step beyond the mandated State training by sending all of our deputies to attend 40 hours of Crisis Intervention Training (CIT) and Defensive Tactics. Both include scenario-based training with an emphasis on teaching de-escalation techniques. Our CIT training was created in conjunction with the National Alliance of Mental Illness (NAMI). We look to outside agencies and professionals to ensure we are getting the training right.

The next phase, 17 weeks of immersion training, includes a variety of experienced coaches who evaluate our performance daily.

Prospective Candidates for Nov. 3 Election Must File by Aug. 18

Three seats on Wilsonville's five-member City s Council will be open during the general election on Tuesday, Nov. 3, 2020. The current terms of Mayor 1 Tim Knapp, City Council President Kristen Akervall and Councilor Joann Linville expire on Dec. 31, 2020.

Qualified individuals may file as candidates for Mayor or City Council. Wilsonville's elected officials serve non-partisan, at-large four-year terms. The filing deadline is Aug. 18.

Wilsonville voters will be electing a new mayor for the first time since 2008. Voters passed a term limits measure during the May primary election that prohibits any individual from serving for more than 12 years within a 20-year period on City Council.

To qualify as a candidate, an individual must be a registered voter who has lived within Wilsonville city limits for at least 12 months prior to Nov. 3, 2020. Election guidelines require that each candidate submits a pre-approved petition with at least 20 signatures from registered voters residing within city limits.

Those who apply are encouraged to obtain additional signatures to ensure a sufficient number are valid. The City's Aug. 18 filing deadline ensures the City Recorder has sufficient time to verify signatures and to allow candidates to correct missing information or obtain additional signatures before the State of Oregon's Aug. 25 filing deadline.

Prospective candidates for Mayor or City Councilor are strongly encouraged to contact City Recorder Kimberly Veliz for details on the process of filing. Materials outlining the process are available at ci.wilsonville.or.us/elections.

For additional information, please contact Kimberly Veliz, City Recorder, at 503-570-1506, cityrecorder@ ci.wilsonville.or.us.

Ignite a Child's Passion for Reading

Dolly Parton's Imagination Library has mailed more than 65,000 books to Wilsonville children since 2012. The non-profit program, which sends a new free book each month to children until their fifth birthday, has about 800 Wilsonville children enrolled.

Through the Imagination Library and Library outreach to local families, parents have more tools to help children succeed in school and in life. When families read together, kids learn faster, are more successful and develop a life-long love of reading.

Enroll your child today or learn more about the program at imaginationlibrary.com.

Getting Back to Business

City Grant Eased Burden for "Talk of the Town" Stylists

Rob Mathis wasn't in it for the money when he took ownership of Talk of the Town hair salon in 2013.

"I'm a firefighter, I don't know anything about the salon business," he admits.

So, what made him register a new LLC and buy the 28-yearold salon?

"Honestly I bought it to keep my wife happy," he said.

Stylist Becky Mathis had leased a chair in Talk of the Town, at 29030 Town Center Loop E., for years, building relationships with clients and the establishment's seven other stylists. She saw ownership as an opportunity to keep her job and to keep a tight-knit circle of friends together.

Talk of the Town's clients, numbering about 60 to 70 people a week, were happy with the continuity of ownership.

"That relationship with your stylist is strong," Rob Mathis said.

Town Center Eye Clinic Once Again Sets Sights on Patient Care

r. Rosilund Hursh has strong ties to Wilsonville.

Her parents lived in Charbonneau, she married her husband, Dr. Lorne Yudcovitch, at the Charbonneau Country Club, and the couple made Eye to Eye Clinic one of Wilsonville Town Center's original occupants in 2002.

Together Hursh and Yudcovitch grew Eye to Eye into a four-physician clinic with 10 support staff and about 150 weekly patients.

The grant left Talk of the Town in position to see

"I feel so blessed that the City stepped in and took action," Rob Mathis said. "We love it here. We love our clients and we love doing business in Wilson-clients as restrictions were loosened.

"I met with staff, explained what it meant to flatten the curve and furloughed everyone," says Dr. Hursh. "It was hard."

A $4,000 Wilsonville Small Business COVID-19 Relief Grant helped Dr. Hursh reopen Eye to Eye Clinic slowly and safely. Since May 11, patients are being welcomed one at a time, with staff split into teams so the office can stay open if one team has to quarantine.

City Hands PPE Surplus to Local Businesses

A 7 ith surplus quantities of Per-V sonal Protective Equipment on hand, the City recently reached out to local small businesses to offer several hundred unused masks and boxes of gloves at no charge.

A few days later, Parks & Recreation staff distributed these items to about 60 Wilsonville small businesses operators who expressed interest.

Grants Program has provided grants of up to $5,500 to 125 Wilsonville businesses impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic. This month we feature two more local businesses impacted by the program. See the complete list at ci.wilsonville. or.us/businessassistance > Shutting down the salon in late March created a ripple effect for Mathis. Stylists operate as contractors, renting their chairs. As an LLC with no actual employees, he didn't qualify for Federal relief.

"The stylists could claim unemployment benefits, but I would have to take out a regular business loan," he said.

Receiving the $2,000 Wilsonville Small Business CO-VID-19 Relief Grant allowed Mathis to pay June's rent without burdening his stylists.

Patients Dr. Hursh saw as children now bring their own kids for eye exams and glasses.

A fixture at Fun in the Park and also a supporter of local schools and Wilsonville Community Sharing, Eye to Eye was dramatically affected by COVID-19. Hursh attempted to keep the clinic open, but quickly learned that heightened cleaning would not be suf-

"We're so thankful for the grant. It helped us stay viable." Said Dr. Hursh.

To her relief, patients have been returning to the clinic in the weeks since re-opening.

"It feels like a big hug from the community," Hursh said.
